

I have been a ham operator for the last two years. I only operate CW on the Novice HF bands. I was licensed in the 1960's and operated as a Novice and General at that time, mostly CW. My re-interest and re-licensing came about because of my desires to operate CW. My early experiences with CW as a Novice were certainly factors in this decision. I loved CW then and I love it even more today. Please do what you can not to minimize in any way the availability of spectrum for CW. Also, provide a licensing path to ensure that CW is offered to new licensees as an incentive for advancement. The kids of today are still more interested in the Morse Code when our local club demonstrates ham radio than in any other mode that we demonstrate. Let their interest guide us in keeping open access to the most efficient, least expensive ham radio entry mode available to a new ham, namely CW. Thanks
